Dear Allen:

I am writing you in behalf of a close friend of mine, Mr. [redacted] who has had a number of conversations with your [redacted] concerning the possibility of [redacted] assisting you people in some fashion. [redacted] has given permission to mentioning his name in this letter.

I know nothing of what has been discussed, but I should like to register strongly for [redacted] He is a first-class man in every respect -- character, integrity, ability and competence.

[redacted] and wants to do something useful for the country. He's a young sixty-four, fit and vigorous.

If you can get him, you will be getting an unusually able, hard-working, discreet executive -- and a grand guy.

Warm personal regards.

Cordially,

Ted
